TWICE PROVEN

If you suffer backache, sleepless nights, tired, dull days and distressing urinary disorders, don't experiment. Read this twice-told testimony. It's Norway evidence—doubly proven.

E. C. Libby, Sanborn St., Norway, says: "I had a great deal of backache which annoyed me to do anything. My head ached and I noticed specks floating before my eyes and my sight blurred. I used different remedies but it was left to Doan's Pills to give me lasting results. I got Doan's at Stone's Drug Store and since using them I have had no return of kidney complaint." (Statement given June 6, 1916.)

On September 3, 1920, Mr. Libby said: "I haven't had occasion to use Doan's Pills or any other kidney medicine since being cured by Doan's. My faith in this remedy is just as strong as ever."

FROM ROADHOUSE TO MORGUE

From the "road house" to the hospital or morgue is a matter of only a few minutes, declares the A. L. A. in its campaign to oust the drunken driver from our highways. This is a feature that seldom gets before the public with its aftermath of deaths, crippled forms, misery, want, poverty and sorrow that follows in the wake of drunken motorists who use our highways for their carousels.

Unless people are brought face to face with an actual individual case and have the opportunity to watch its development, they forget the occurrence, thinking, if any thinking at all is done, that it is only another of those unfortunate accidents peculiar to the rapid growth of the automobile industry. But hospitals know the gruesome records with the long nights of pain and watching. Police officials can tell of suffering and sorrow and want that trail along for months and even years after one of those needless drunken accidents. Many of these victims become long "shut ins" whose darkened fires no money can make what God intended them to be; and the horror of it all is that many of the thousands of deaths of little children between five and fifteen years are preventable. All of them caused by drunken drivers fully so.

During the past five years the deaths by drink-craved drivers have been on the increase. Every state is confronted with the problem, and every state has its own method of dealing with it. One Chicago judge compels the autoist arrested for causing a death, to visit the morgue and look upon the dead and mangled forms of the victims with the hope that at a view may stamp upon his drink-befuddled brain the enormity of his crime. Imagine him with bowed head and with eyes slowly regarding the rows of silent witnesses to man's depraved appetite, suddenly gazing upon the form of his own dead child, killed by some other drunken driver. Dramatic? The word is inadequate, ungringless, and the picture is not over drawn for such a situation has arisen.

God forbid that every drunken driver may thus be reformed, but every such driver may realize the possibility of such an event.

When we consider all these drunken drivers as low-browed thugs we are wrong. They are not. Many of them are men of standing in their community. Our Court records prove many of them are in business, many hold responsible positions, and many are thoughtful youths of gentle breeding, attending our great institutions of learning. But drink and a fast moving car in many hands are potent of disaster and death.

One of the New York weeklies with a circulation of more than two million copies has offered a prize of one thousand dollars for the best letter for or against prohibition. The most convincing argument possible to make for it and which every drunken driver should be required to carefully study would be a vast black framed picture depicting the horror, misery and sorrow caused by the thousands of lives sacrificed to their depravity.

To show how active the drunken automobile driver is even as late as last month and how careless of life and property continues the A. L. A. we will pluck a page from the book of his hideous record covering the week beginning November 5, 1923 and will review it as reported in the daily newspapers.

We find in the space of seven days he has been arrested forty-eight times, six times a day, and that he has been fined twenty-two times, put in jail or at least sentenced to jail for short periods nine times, while the results of remaining arrests are not recorded in the press. Now read of the pain and suffering and sorrow that he has caused by his drunken acts. One woman killed, one woman badly injured and reported that she may die, two men seriously injured and if they do live, will be crippled for life, besides thousands of dollars worth of property destroyed.

This was not an exceptional week, in fact a very mild one when we consider that during the two following days twenty-two more were either arrested or before the courts for this same offense, and this is only a partial, not a complete record. Up to November 1, 1923, 2358 drunken drivers had been convicted in Court. In October 342 were convicted, 81 were given while only twenty-five were actually committed to jail.

Computing the average miles as fifty covered by each of these offenders, it will be seen that in the aggregate they cover thousands of miles in traveling our highways and thus endanger daily many of them by our Courts when they regard the drunken driver as a danger on our highways by small fines instead of a stiff jail sentence.

EAST SUMMER

Fair a Big Success

The ladies' fair was a splendid success. The hall was beautifully decorated with suggestions of Christmas, here and there. The stage was converted into a Japanese tea room and was a bower of beauty with a profusion of cherry blossoms, Japanese lanterns and chrysanthemums.

Small tables with dainty appointments were grouped about, and five of our young matrons dispensed afternoon tea to their many guests in a very graceful manner. Articles at the several booths sold rapidly and nearly all were sold before evening.

Supper was served and an entertainment was given in the evening with the following program:

Solo.....Harry Chealey
Farce, Mrs. Willis, Will.....Stella Robinson
A Plea for the Tuberculosis Christmas Seals
Solo.....W. H. Eastman
Piano and saxophone duet.....E. R. H. Stetson and Roger Eastman
Duet.....E. R. H. Stetson and Alvin Barrows

Great credit for the success of the fair is due, not only to the promoters of it, but also to the people of the community who heartily co-operated with the committees in their work. Many ladies came from Buckfield and bought generously from the different booths. The total receipts amounted to $177.

Alvan Barrows and Vinton Braden are redecorating the audience room of the church. Mr. Barrows has had much experience and is an expert at the work.

Annie Crockett spent a few days at Oscar Turner's this week.
Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Park and Stephen Russell of South Paris spent Thanksgiving day with Ella Heald.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Bell have moved from their farm into the upstairs rent at M. R. Fogg's.

Mrs. Lester Merrill has returned from Parkman, where she has been assisting in caring for her father-in-law, who is now gaining rapidly. She is now at her father's, W. H. Eastman's, with her little son who remained there during her absence of two weeks.

Augusta and Gertrude Eastman and Isabelle Houghton went to Lewiston, Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Palmer, Little Junior and Lilla Palmer were in Lewiston, Monday.

Central Maine Power Company Is Developing MORE Power

14,000 horsepower is now being added to take care of the increasing demands for power.

Central Maine Power Company is again developing more power. This time it is adding 14,000 horsepower—partly by remodeling old stations, partly by adding new units and partly by building new stations.

To Have Power Ready

This is a big part of it's job—always to have plenty of power ready for the ultimate demands of it's customers.

This demand which has steadily increased for over a quarter of a century, continues to increase with each succeeding month.

Power Demands Will Continue

Homes are daily finding new uses for electric energy, old industries are growing, new industries are being added. The demand will continue to increase.

Write for our latest circular which tells more about the present developments of this company.

Central Maine Power Co.

Augusta, Maine

So Central Maine Power Company is adding 14,000 more horsepower of electric energy.

Find Uses for New Capital

As long as homes along it's lines continue to consume more electric energy and as long as Maine industries continue to grow, Central Maine Power Company will find uses for new capital.

This money, as in the past, will be raised from the sale of it's Preferred Stock.

Offers Investment Opportunity

If you wish to get back of a Maine hydro-electric company that is getting back of your state, invest in the 7 per cent. Preferred Stock of Central Maine Power Company.

The price is $107.50 a share. The yield is 6 1-2 per cent. net.

She was the daughter of Emery E. and Abby Swift Lowell and one of three children. She married Andrew J. Foster and to them were born seven children, five of whom survive. Mabel, wife of Percy Millett; Cassie, wife of Maurice Pence; Clinton Foster, Raymond Foster and Lloyd Foster. One child died in 1902 and Arthur, for whom the American Legion Post in South Paris is named, was killed in France.

She also leaves one sister and one brother and several grandchildren.

The voice of Hon. B. G. McIntire of this town was picked from the air early Monday evening, when his speech was broadcasted from station W B Z Springfield, Mass. A group of fans at the A. L. Clark Drug Co. store picked up the station with a Federal as Mr. McIntire commenced broadcasting. The words came in strong, and were heard distinctly in all parts of the store. So clear was the enunciation and inflection peculiar to Mr. McIntire there was no questioning his identity.

Other Norway fans heard the speech and obtained satisfactory results. President Coolidge was also picked up but not so distinctly.

THE WAY OF A CRAZY MAN

By Fred M. Davis
A true story, written for the Norway Advertiser.

I had just got seated in my kitchen a few months ago, trying to enjoy the evening paper, when Millett breezed in through the open door and kicked up a double shuffle, lame as he was, that would be a credit to any comedian this side of the Rocky Mountains.

He reached for the usual hand-shake and said, "I am looking for an all round individual to help me out up the line and thought perhaps you would help me a few days."

"Well, what do you want me to do?" I said, as he finished speaking long enough to take a long breath and to get seated comfortably.

I threw the newspaper to one, settled back in my chair and prepared myself to listen to his story.

"Well, you see the old woman that owns the place near Snow's Falls is coming on here with her guests and the opening night is near at hand and she plans to have the celebration at the old mill that has so many years been idle. She will arrive here and stop at the Norway Tavern tonight and we will all go up by train tomorrow morning. You see the canoes have come, eight or ten in number, that lay there waiting to be uncrated on the bank of the Androscoggin, also eight or ten canvas tents to be pitched on the lawn. The piano we are going to move down to the mill and glass to be set therein. The barn is full of carriages that she wants put down there in the basement, but the party is to be held on the ground floor."

The mantle clock plodded along to nearly midnight when Millett decided to stay all night, but was up early and started to pay a visit and meet his guest at Norway Tavern. Two or three hours had elapsed when he returned and stated that she did not stop here at either Norway or South Paris, but stopped at the Falmouth Hotel at Portland, Me., instead.

I thought perhaps an outing of this kind would do very well and as the pay he offered was fairly good, I gathered up a small kit of tools and after breakfast we were soon seated in Norway Tavern waiting to take the morning train. We boarded the 9:20 and we thought some of leaving the train at Snow's Falls and save the trouble of walking back from West Paris depot. Patrons of the road will remember that an account of the grade and deep ravine that the train nearly comes to a stop at this particular point on the Grand Trunk railway and I knew we could easily leave the train while still in motion.

I had made out a list of things we needed and as they were to be bought at the stores, we continued on and left the train at West Paris station. Millett had already notified me that he had food to eat at the house and when the train stopped we alighted and instead of going down town, we started back down the track, both walking briskly.

"What about the list of things wanted at the store?" I said.

He answered that we would not stop today but would go back and get everything wanted that night or the next day. Like many people Millett had a toe that bothered him considerably and at short intervals he would complain about walking and said it hurt him badly. He had already told me of his dropping a heavy piece of iron on his foot while working sometime previous in a government institution. As for myself, I rather enjoyed the walk as the weather was fair and the air was full of fragrance and fresh breezes.

We had got well underway when Millett seated himself on the bank and seemed quite exhausted.

"What are you pestered out, Millett?" "No," he said, "It's no use I've got to dress my toe."

I watched him as he pulled a bundle of rags and surgeon's cotton from his pocket and started in, seeming to be in readiness to dress his own wounds without the help of a surgeon or one who practices medicine.

We started along after a few minutes and Millett spied a bird fluttering along and said, "I believe that bird is lamer than I am." I hurried along and soon gathered up the bird that scrambled along the track ahead of us. Millett limped along and we soon arrived at the old mill.

"There," he said, "You see the old woman is going to let me have the use of this place while I look after her business this summer and I want you to show me the best way to fix a run to put the carriages up into the building. She gave me permission to take down these out buildings and to run things to suit myself."

"Won't this make a good paint shop?"

"Yes," I said, "It will make a grand good place" and thought nothing strange as I knew that Millett had been a carriage painter in the past.

We started in to look over the mill. Millett seemed interested to have me see what a substantial building it was. We clambered up the staircase one floor above the other, until we reached the top and stood looking out the windows, where nearly every pane had been broken. The place had been stripped bare and a more forsaken place could not be found.

Marks on the heavy timber overhead told that heavy machinery had been attached and removed many years ago. The old mill wheel was silent and had long since lain idle, being unable to do its bit in the working world and the hum of industry.

"What a shame that such a power as that is not in use," I said as we watched the rushing water sixty feet below, where the loudest voice could not be heard above its roar.

Our voices echoed through the different apartments and with a shudder I hurried down the stairs and in a short space of time we reached our destination.

"What shall I do with this bird, Millett?" I said as we turned into the door yard at the place where we were to carry out the plans laid before me the night before.

"Knock the box off that tree and put him in that."

Millett borrowed my keys, saying he had lost his, while I pulled and wrenched at the box, but it would not give away as it was nailed securely.

Millett unlocked the door and came back to me, bringing a hammer in his hand. I followed him through the open door and I saw at a glance that I was in a home that was far from poverty or destitution. "Try that instrument," he said, and told me that was the piano we had got to run down to the old mill.

He did not look for "The Lost Chord" but my fingers did run idly over the noisy keys. I amused myself for a while, looking at the bric-a-brac and costly paintings that hung on the walls and finding myself alone and hearing a noise overhead, I stepped into the hall and spoke in low tones, "Are you there, Millett?"

"Come," he said, "I want you to see this chamber." And I followed him through each room as he pointed and beckoned and my eyes bulged out at the splendor displayed.

"This is my room," he said as he reached and took down a silver dagger that hung overhead and started in to brandish it through the air in a way that would make Jesse James look like the last rose of summer. I believe there is a time in every man's life, sooner or later, when he feels the need of prayer. I did not pray, for he started in to tell me that as the buildings stood practically alone in a lone spot, he felt that he needed protection and if intruders came to bother him, such would be his portion.

"The old woman must be very rich," I said.

"She is rich, her husband owned and operated that mill and her jewels are said to be worth a million of money."

I watched him as he ransacked each drawer, stopping now and then to rummage some old brooch or photograph cast high and dry on the sandy beach of time.

"Come," he said, "Get down to business, we may find things that are of use to us, see if you find anything to your liking."

"Millett, I may look rough, but I cannot turn robber. I will not take chances like this and perhaps look from behind prison bars. You may gather up your plunder and bury it under yonder tree, but as for me I am nobody's secondhand and my mother's first and best advice to me was, 'Be honest.' I came here to do an honest job and what about the cash I have around the house and barn. It was one of those hot, sultry days and the perspiration trickled down my face as we labored there beneath the boiling sun. After the hay was nearly spread, I stood alone back of the house and looked around for Millett, but he was nowhere to be seen. I made a little more thorough investigation and there he was seated on a bench in the rustic building across the way.

"Come," he shouted as I hurried to his side, just as he started to sip. "Was it a choice beverage such as the Indians had at their game of winneps? No, it was a jar of cool milk that he held firmly in his iron grasp and drank like a desert ranger.

"Oh, the old woman got five dollars on each one and sold them to a man at Locke's Mills."

"Very well, so much less work for us," I said, "Where is the pack mule and the mustang that were supposed to be in the box car here on the siding?"

"Oh, they were unloaded early this morning, they are up in the back pasture."

"We will not hurry today," he said, "The old woman is paying the bills, and I thought that he intended to make his statement good.

I left the chamber, leaving Millett to carry out his program to suit himself and as he had tired of hunting, the feathered songster that escaped in the front room, I started in to take up and finish the task in the parlor myself.

I heard the steady strokes of a scythe whipping through the grass just outside the window and on going out, I found out it was not the reaper death, but was a neighbor instead, who lives in the next house below and had been hired to trim up around the buildings.

I took up my task in the parlor again and had just found the bird when I heard Millett's footsteps coming, clump-clump, down the chamber stairs. The factory whistle at West Paris blew for the noon hour, and as Millett had told me the night before that he had plenty of food, I ventured to ask this question, "Where are the eatables that you told about?"

"Oh, they are up to West Paris in my trunk."

"My stomach is like a bucket with the bottom kicked out, nothing in it," I said, as Millett shuffled out through the open door and the reaper who had overheard our conversation leaned on his scythe and looked at me with a half sick smile on his face.

"Could you help a hungry straggler?" I said, "I have money and am willing to pay well for it." A few minutes passed when his young son was instructed to go and bring a lunch, such as they had in readiness, from the next house below.

Going by Millett's ideas, I began to help spread out the hay that lay in winnowes around the house and barn. It was one of those hot, sultry days and the perspiration trickled down my face as we labored there beneath the boiling sun. After the hay was nearly spread, I stood alone back of the house and looked around for Millett, but he was nowhere to be seen. I made a little more thorough investigation and there he was seated on a bench in the rustic building across the way.

PATRIOTISM

Having been a teacher of Patriotism for several years, it has been most surprising to learn how few people understand the full import of the word Patriotism! So many can only connect it with war! There is scarcely a word in the English language that has so much embodied in it and that requires so much time to outline and explain its diversified lessons as has the word Patriotism.

Patriotism is what is necessary today to be taught to the children in our schools! It is the men who were born with a true patriotic spirit and have had it nourished from infancy that count today. Men who believe in God, in their country and in themselves! Teach our children the fundamental principles upon which our forefathers built this country, also a true understanding of our Flag.

what it stands for, and we have men with deep rooted principles, who will not be self centered, who will be willing to sacrifice when the occasion calls for self sacrifice, men who when the majority of votes have placed a president in office, a governor in office, or in fact any official, will stand by him under any and all circumstances.

This is true patriotism, such men can be trusted! Men who keep the faith, who have ideals and cherish them, men to find fault, who do not believe the foolish political propaganda that helps all the mails today. When we have such good pure one hundred per cent men for leaders as Calvin Coolidge and Percival Baxter, it is the duty of every man and woman in the country to show their patriotism by doing everything in their power to keep them where they are needed in office.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION HOME

CALENDAR FOR 1924

According to the way of thinking, a calendar should be above all, useful.

Unfortunately many of the calendars we see are nothing but pretty pictures with calendar attachments.

In the Companion Home Calendar for 1924, however, we find a calendar beautifully printed in red, blue and gold, and designed especially for handy reference.

Each page carries not only the calendar of the current month in bold readable type, but also a marginal reference to the preceding and coming months, the moon's phases, and a choice bit of cheerful philosophy. A copy of this calendar is sent free to every subscriber who pays $2.50 for the 52 numbers of The Youth's Companion for 1924.

Catarrrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. Catarrhal Deafness requires constitutional treatment. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE is a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed, it is not only closed but catarrhal deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be removed, your hearing may be destroyed forever. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system, thus reducing inflammation and restoring normal conditions.

THE LOST ART

(With apologies to the author of "The Lost Chord")
Standing one day at the cake-board
I ached from head to toe,
My ankles pained like the toothache,
And my feet were loathe to go.
I know not what I was cooking
Or what I was baking them,
But the "things" I took from the oven
Were unfit for the stomachs of men.
They flooded the air of my kitchen
With an odor that would not go,
And it worked on my weary nerves
With a touch of infinite woe.
It stirred up pain and sorrow
Like the evil forces of life,
It made me question the policy
Of having become a wife.
It linked the past with the present,
Then mother's good food I ate,
And I trembled with apprehension
When I thought of my present state.
I have sought—but I seek it vainly—
A skill in culinary arts so fine—
For the "gift" in my mother's make-up
That never entered into mine.
It may be that on my death-bed
I will wish to be cooking once more,
It may be that only in Hades
I shall long for that cake-board of yore.
MRS. ELIZABETH SCRIBNER.

NORTH WATERFORD

Albany Line

There will be a reception given by Myron Lord and wife (nee Hazel Herriek) and Frank Pike and wife (nee Gwendolyn Lord) Saturday evening, Dec. 15 at the I. O. O. F. Hall in North Waterford. Fine music for dancing, ice cream and cake will be served. An invitation is extended to all.

Myron Lord and wife are keeping house in his father's upstairs rent in North Waterford.

Pearl Weymouth is going to cook for Wilfred Hersey in his camp at Stoneham this winter.

Leon Kimball and son Ivan are doing some carpentering for E. K. Shedd this week.

Lafayette Flint has gone to Berlin, N. H., to work for Blanchard & Son, started Monday. He is to do the filing.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pike of South Waterford spent the Sabbath with their grandmother, Mrs. Shedd, the 9th. They are soon to keep house in Sweden. Mrs. Pike is called a first class teacher and it was hoped she would still keep the school in the Millett District, which she has been offered at an increased salary.

Mrs. Leon Kimball and son Ivan who have been visiting relatives in New Hampshire, returned home last week. They report a very enjoyable visit. Little Lucie also went with them. She walks, too and from the Dresser school regularly, a distance of over a mile, and but six years of age.

David McAllister is running his fish cart this winter. Has all kinds of fish, oysters, clams, etc.

Roy Lord and wife have put in a large quantity of Christmas candy and other goods too numerous to mention. They are fresh and nice.

James Stone is still building camps at his mill site. A large force of men are at work there and business is rushing.

Velma Hobson was home over the week end from Norway High School.

Mrs. Newell Andrews assisted Mrs. Henry Durgin with her housework a few days last week. Mrs. Durgin had an ill turn.

Stanley Lord visited his brother, Lee, one day this week.

Mrs. Fred Hazelton runs a Larkin pantry and keeps a large assortment of goods. She is one of our smartest business women, one who is greatly missed whenever she is absent.

Irvin Morey, wife and child, are stopping with Charles Morey at present.

Mrs. Carlisle spent the day Saturday with Mrs. E. K. Shedd. She is the mother of Calvert Fullerton and is making her home with him. She is a remarkably smart woman of her age. She has knit many pairs of fine mittens and stockings this fall and they are well knit and well shaped as any that we have ever seen.

SOUTH ALBANY

Ernest Grover is at work for Hegman Holt, cutting pine on Dundee.

Mae Penfold of South Paris has recently visited her cousin, June Browne.

Marjorie Canwell, who is attending Norway High School, is out of school sick with chicken pox.

W. I. Beckler, tax collector for Albany, was here on his tax business, Saturday. Mr. Beckler will go to Lewiston, Monday, to attend the State Grange which meets there next week. He is a delegate from Round Mountain Grange of which he is master.

Walter Canwell sawed wood for Ezra Lebroke Friday, with his new gasoline engine and wood sawing outfit. Harold Canwell and Merritt Sawin worked with him.

Wilbur McAllister of Stoneham visited his cousin, David McAllister, recently. Ingalls McAllister's children are out of school with what is supposed to be chicken pox.

Mrs. Ernest Grover is staying with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Allen. Mr. Allen is at work for Fred Littlefield.

Lester Allen of North Waterford was at Ezra Lebroke's one day last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Millett of Waterford called at Merritt Sawin's, Sunday. Mrs. Millett is making some very nice cheese. Homemade cheese is becoming a rarity, but a taste of this cheese brings back the days when nearly every farmer's wife made their own cheese.

BOLSTER'S MILLS

Edward Scribner, Master of Crooked River Grange, has gone to Lewiston to attend State Grange. A. W. Weston and wife are also in attendance at State Grange.

Jason Scribner went to Riverton to carry George Cummings to attend a funeral, Monday. Mrs. Scribner dined with her daughter, Mrs. Marjorie Mc Dougall, at Woodford.

Edna, the young daughter of Mrs. Gertrude Brett, had her leg broken while playing at the afternoon recess of school, Monday.

Clyde Andrews has returned from a brief stay in Florida. He now thinks New England good enough for him.

Mrs. Carrie Weston has been confined to her home by illness for a week past.

Universalist Church Notes
Plans are being made for the Ladies of the World Workers Society to hold a Christmas sale, supper and entertainment on Wednesday evening, Dec. 19.

The response to the efforts being made to hold regular Church service and have pastoral work in the community, is very gratifying, both in attendance at the services and financially.

The regular Sunday Evening Service of Song and Sermon will be held at the Library at 7 P. M., Dec. 16. The subject of the sermon by the pastor, Rev. W. A. Smith, will be, "Crucifixion Then and Now."

Eastman & Andrews

10 Market Square,

South Paris, Maine

Will the United States stop building motor cars, close up its factories and return to horse drawn vehicles. Absurd question! Yet there is only one alternative; if we are not to lose the economic and social benefits of motor transportation, we must supply roads upon which the power vehicles may run. It is impossible to separate the water from the wave, the gold from the bracelet, or the track from the locomotive. It is equally impossible to separate the road from the truck, or the passenger car from the highway. They are halves vehicle alone, or highway alone; it is both together. Our roads were planned and built for means of transportation which is gone. The earliest highways were for horse riders, the stagecoach came next, after which we had the buggy and the wagon. The narrow road, the steep grade, the soft surface were all admissible for these; none of them are economic for the swift and powerful motor. We have "improved" our highways—some of them and widened a few, but we still build a road with the idea that it will "last" but a few years, and need "constant repairs." We still build in widths predicted upon slow-moving vehicles, and we still wind our highways up hill and down dale and around devious curves because it is "easiest" and "cheapest" so to do. That era is gone! The new one is fairly here. We must either build our roads for our modern vehicles, or scrap the unthinkably absurd, it seems logical to believe that the era of the wide, expensive, permanent, hard surface road is here.

Law and Order Always Follows the Broad Highway

That civilization owes a great debt to the highway builders can be understood by reference to history. The first European highways were those which went out from Rome, that the Roman soldier might have easy and quick access to the remotest bounds of his great empire. With them went law and order. Later, over the highways, went the school master and the college, the education, the institution and its teachers. The missionary of the Cross used the highway, the church spread its doctrine over the highway, and to this day, the great churches, schools, colleges, hospitals, and institutions for the amelioration of the condition of mankind, are found always on, never away from, great highways.

It is the highway which made the city, not the city the highway. It is the highway which made the demand for the railroad, which is but a steel highway for cars of steel. It is the highway over which all freight must travel all that is good, noble, desirable in life.

Where good highways are, there is a good civilization. Where are poor highways, are usually ignorance, poverty, disease, lawlessness, lack of culture, poor standards of living, misery. Investment in highway means investment in civilization!

FRYEBURG

John J. Pike

John J. Pike, who died recently, was the oldest man in town, therefore had carried the "Post Cane" for several years. Mr. Pike was the son of Elder John and Hannah (Hubbard) Pike. He was born Feb. 17, 1833, and after attending the common schools, he began work on his father's fine farm consisting of two hundred acres of the forest land in Fryeburg, and eventually succeeded to the ownership of the same with the homestead included, which he always kept up to a high standard as long as he was able and later his two sons, John and Enoch, succeeded him, and with the strength of youth, and all the modern improvements and the lessons of thrift learned from their parents, the Pike farm is today one of the show places in Fryeburg.

In 1857 Mr. Pike married Mary J. Wiley of Fryeburg, daughter of Enoch W. and Miranda Wiley, by this marriage there were six children, John W., who married a lady from Pennsylvania; Hannah H., who married Frank Howe, and lives in Dorchester; Miranda J., her twin sister, who married J. G. Severance of Lowell; Enoch W., who resides on the home place; Minnie M., the wife of Clarence Osgood; Winnie S., her twin sister, who died several years ago. Mr. Pike's wife died in 1883. In 1885 he married Mrs. Francena Benton Wiley, who died some years ago.

Mr. Pike has been most tenderly cared for by his sons and daughters, who have vied with each other to mark every milestone and aid in adding strength and pleasure to the natural decline that accompanies such a long life.

Mr. Pike was a republican, had filled several town offices. He was a great reader and deeply interested in political affairs, and never failed to be ready to vote. He was a member of the I. O. O. F. and also united years ago with Pequequet Lodge Knights of Pythias.

Mr. Pike was regarded with the highest esteem by his large circle of friends and townsmen who attended the funeral that was held at his late home, Sunday afternoon, Dec. 2.

Willard Develops Original Radio Batteries

Early in the history of radio broadcasting, Mr. T. A. Willard and his associates, who have always led in the development of automobile batteries, saw that no then existing types of batteries met the peculiar requirements of radio service. Therefore, they set to work to produce a new and original B storage battery—one that would be leak-proof, that would deliver all its energy in the form of useful current, and that would maintain its voltage for considerable periods without recharging.

In their efforts they were greatly aided by their long and extensive experience in making various kinds of batteries—automobile, airplane, railway, lighting plant, and the like—and by a previous Willard achievement—Threaded Rubber Insulation.

The result of their work is the Willard Radio B Storage Battery—entirely original in design—which accomplishes all that was desired and gives radio a new meaning for the average set owner.

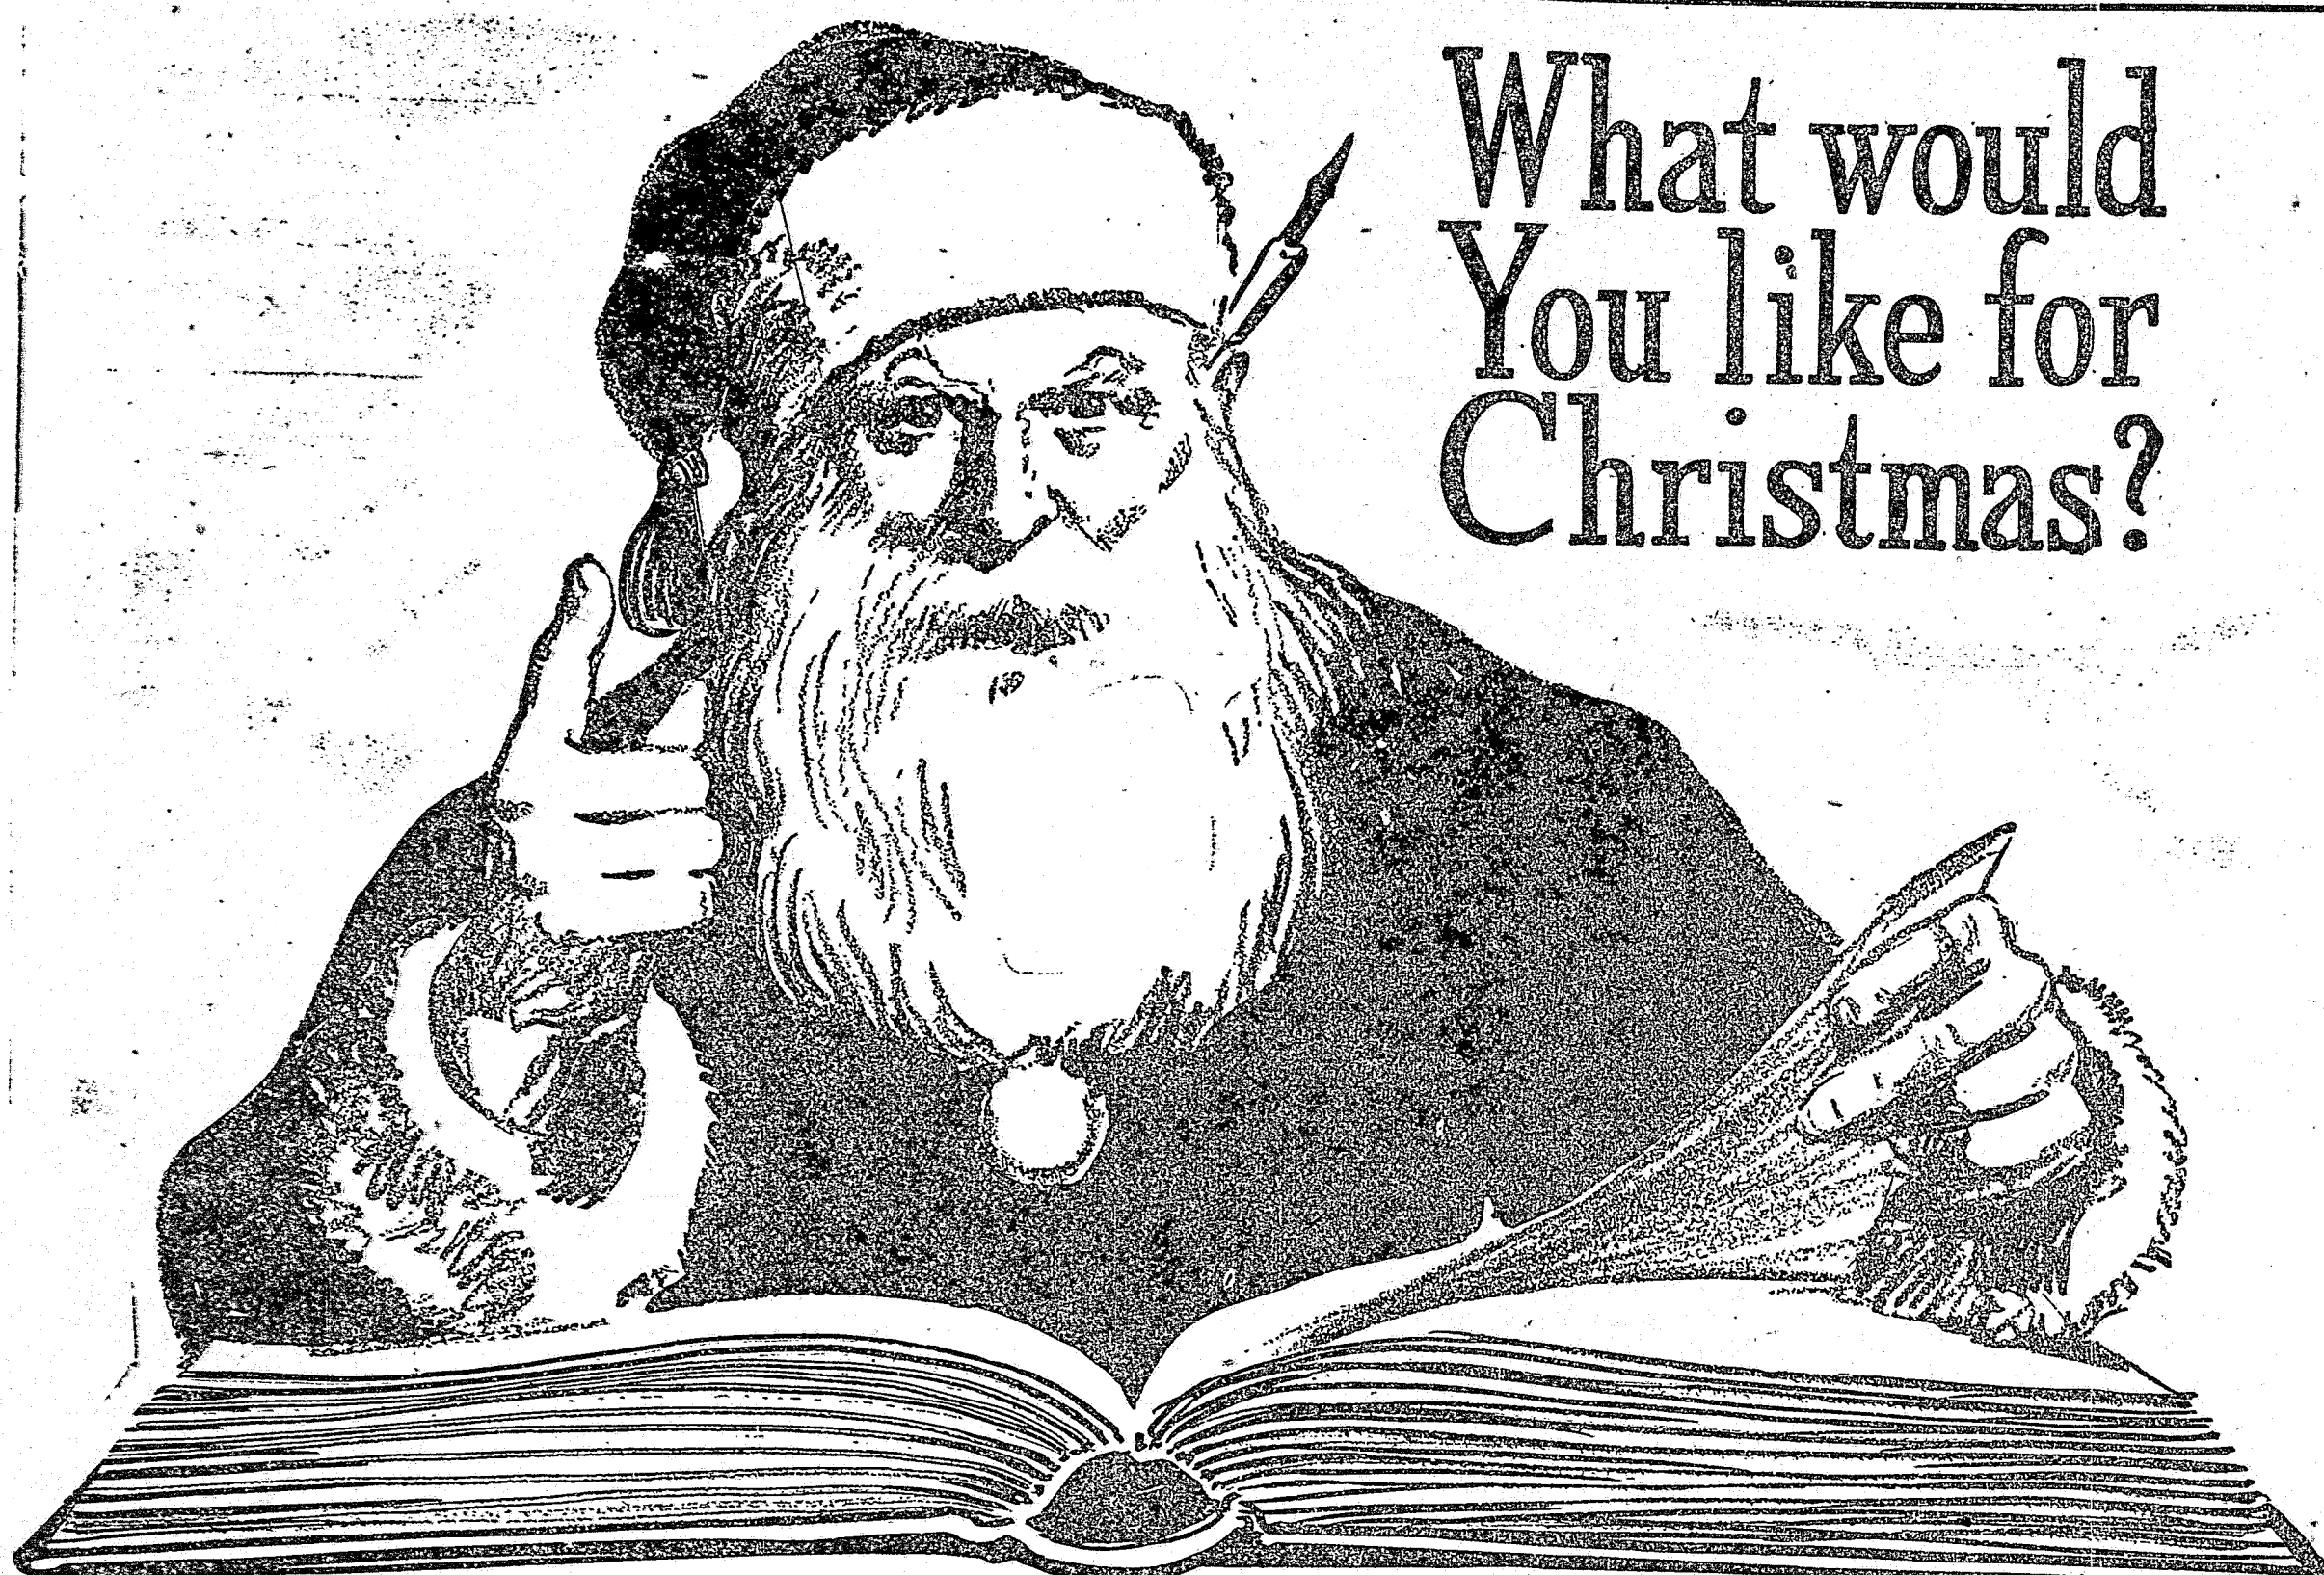

In many important respects this battery is distinctly different from any other radio B battery, and every departure from conventional design has a bearing upon the improved results.

"BIG LETTER FROM HOME"

A subscriber in California whose home was in Oxford County inclosed the following note with her renewal:

"I cannot get along without my Big Letter from home, which is the name my friends in California have given to the Advertiser."

"That is just what the editor of the Advertiser is trying to make of the paper, and the correspondents do their part when they send all the news of their fields."

But the readers of the Advertiser can also help in the good work by giving items to the correspondents and to the local reporter or by telephoning them to the office. A great many people do so but occasionally we hear of people who refuse to give items of news to the correspondent in their vicinity or to the local reporter. Sometimes these refusers are subscribers to the Advertiser and they evidently forget that if all the people were like them and refused to have their names appear in the Advertiser the paper would have little excuse for existing.

In this connection we are reminded of a man living in a somewhat remote section of the country several years ago who instructed us not to have his name appear in the Advertiser. We wondered why, but understood later that he had left a distant state under a cloud and did not want his whereabouts known. He had a good reason for avoiding publicity but very few people have.

Our subscribers can assist in broadcasting the "Big Letter From Home" by sending us the names of any people who have gone from their vicinity and may not be subscribers to the Advertiser. We can send them sample copies and they can send their subscription, thus giving them a "Big Letter From Home." It is not too early to remind our readers that the Advertiser will make an acceptable Christmas present. We have cards to send with the first copy stating that the paper is a Christmas gift and by whom it is sent.

If newspapers told the truth, the newspapers would not only be put out of business, but about sixty per cent of the people of each community would leave town. If you deny this assertion, your denial proves the as-

"In Old New England"

The four act comedy drama, "In Old New England," was presented Dec. 6-7 at the Grange Hall under the auspices of Paris Grange. A fair sized audience attended the first evening, but on the second, standing room was at a premium with every seat occupied. Dunham's Orchestra played during the show and for the dance after the play on the last night.

The story of this rural comedy is based on a designing farmer, David Angell, trying to acquire the estate of his neighbor, Jedediah Perkins. Unable to strike an honest bargain, he schemed to have the Perkins farm regardless of methods used. Angell hides valuable bonds and accuses Tom Perkins of theft. To keep Tom from jail, Mrs. Perkins mortgages the homestead. This document falls into Angell's hands according to the scheme, and the villain seems to be master of the situation. A city boarder, Robert Donald, and "Wash" Jackson's mule saved the farm and made the Perkins family wealthy. The mule kicked up dirt which led to the discovery of a valuable mineral and the boarder vindicated the boy by ferreting out Angell's scheme to defraud.

Plenty of comedy was worked along with the mild plot. Eccentric characters, a part and parcel of the average rural community, convulsed the audiences with droll sayings and more droll actions. Love making was not omitted and a general matrimonial scramble developed, just ahead of the final curtain with everybody left happy and contented.

All parts were well taken and played up without overdoing the thing. Many have expressed an opinion that this is one of the best dramas ever presented in Grange Hall.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of My Beloved Husband, Herbert Melvin Adams, who was drowned in Kezar Lake, Dec. 10, 1922.

O Kezar, lovely Kezar,
How could'st thou so cruel be
As to tear our loved one from our hearts
And take him boldly unto thee?
Thou left us but a memory
Of husbands, rare and few;
Thou left us but a memory
Of a father's love so true.
We shared his home, we shared his heart,
We shared his sorrows and his joys;
Were, of his life, a vital part,
A loving wife and two dear boys.
He left us for a short brief hour,
A simple mission to fulfill;
When thou, within thy cruel power,
Didst choose his tender heart to still.
He loved thee, Kezar, mild and free,
He loved thee, dear, from shore to shore,
He loved thee because thou wert thee;
He never could have loved thee more.
He loved thee in the morning light,
He loved thy sunset tints of rose,
He loved thee in the springtime bright,
He loved thee clad in winter snows.
He loved thine islands standing nigh,
He loved thy rugged shores so bold;
He loved thy mountains towering high,
Thy summer warmth, thy winter cold.
For nearly twenty years he dwelt
Upon thy lovely northern shore;
And heard the murmur of thy waves
Each night, close by his cottage door.
He loved thy surface mirror smooth,
He loved thy roughened waves of blue;
He loved thy brooks, he loved thy nooks,
He loved thee, Kezar, 'cause 'twas you!
O Kezar, charming Kezar,
How could'st thou so cruel be!
Thou tore our loved one from our hearts,
And took him wholly unto thee.
But wert thou cruel, Kezar,
(This query doth arise)
Could he have known that instant death
Would suddenly surprise
His footsteps, would he not have chosen, Kezar,
A bed upon thy breast,
And the music of thy silvery waves,
To lull him to Eternal Rest?
We think, perchance, O Kezar
This would have been his choice,
If to his loving preference
He could have given voice.
Then, Kezar, wend thy peaceful way
And as thy "nestling" rolls
We reckon thee, each passing day,
The haven of our loved one's soul.
LILLIAN (FROST) ADAMS.
